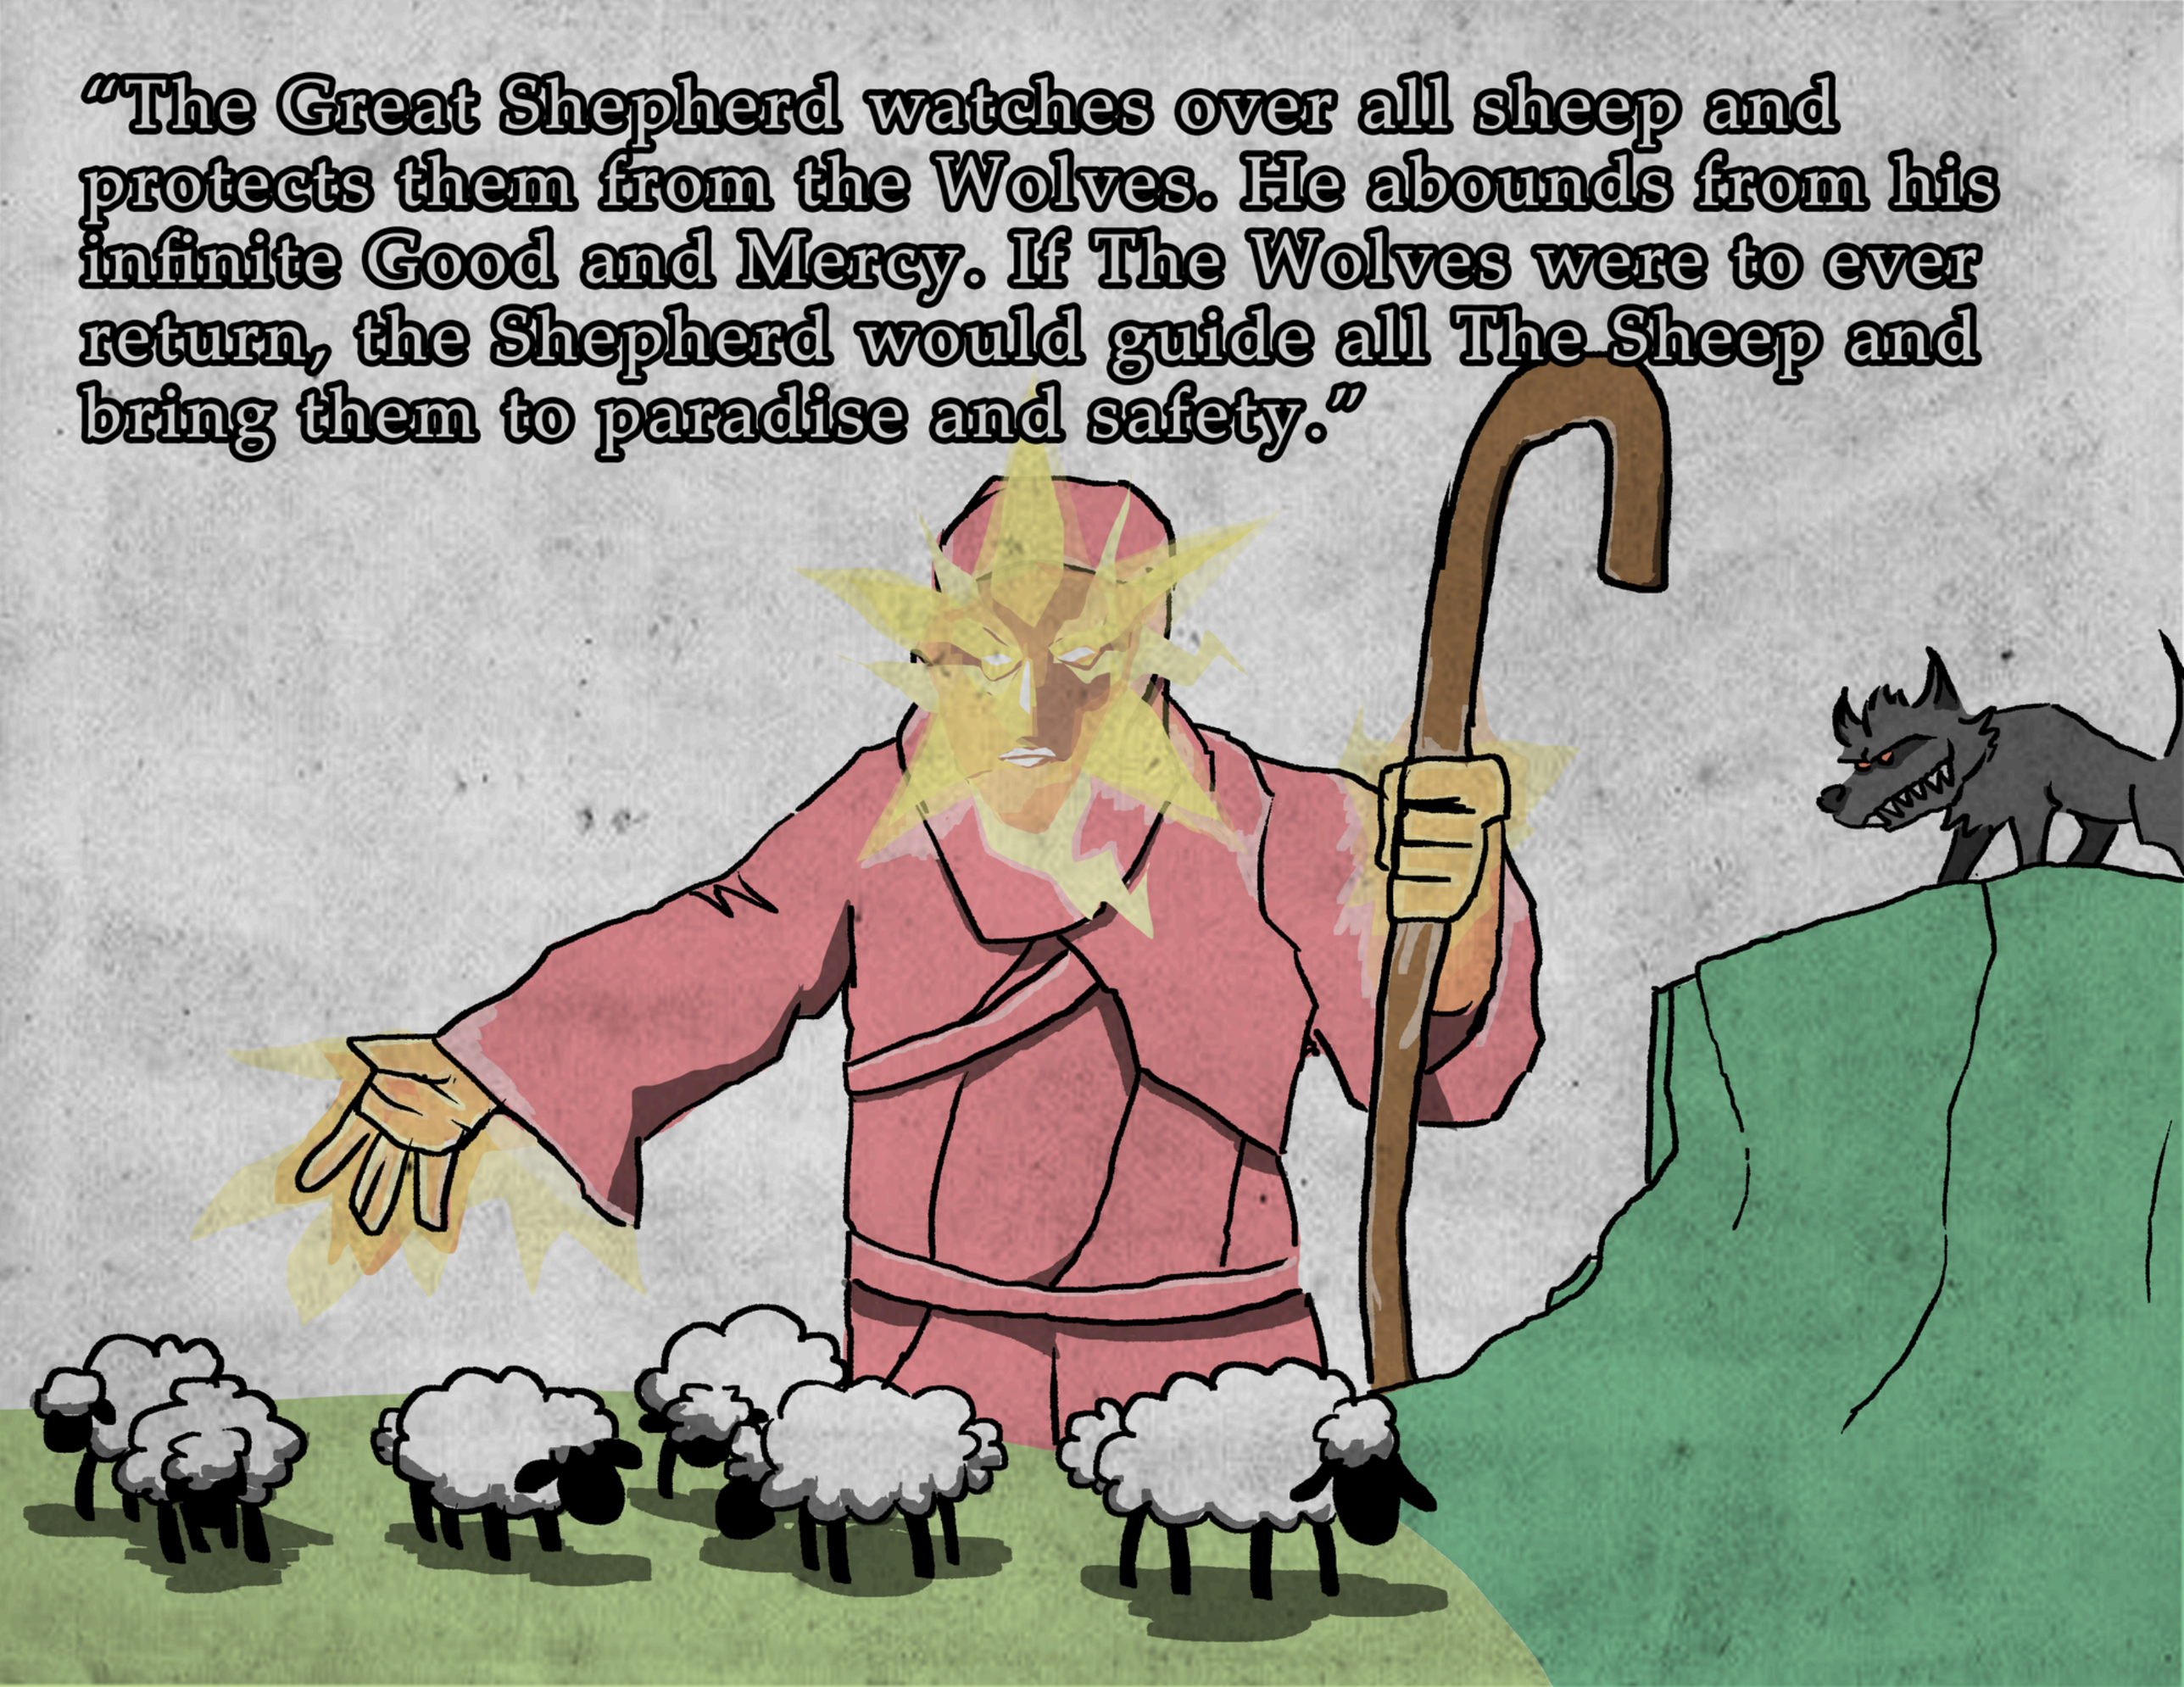
The Book Of Sheep

Once Upon A Time on Christmas Eve, Little Lamb Blossom wanted to stay up late for Santa Claus, but her parents tell her it was too late and it was time for bed. Blossom asks her Mother if she could read the Book of Sheep to her as a bedtime story before falling asleep.

"The Great Shepherd watches over all sheep and protects them from the Wolves. He abounds from his infinite Good and Mercy. If The Wolves were to ever return, the Shepherd would guide all The Sheep and bring them to paradise and safety."



"The Great Sheperd cannot protect all animals though, only Sheep. That is why it is the job of the Sheep to travel the world and turn as many other animals into Sheep by reading The Book of Sheep to them. If an animal is turned into a sheep, The Great Shepard will save them when the Wolves attack again."

Blossom asks if She could turn other animals in Sheep by spreading the word of The Great Shepard. Her Father promises that if She pledges her life to The Great Shepherd, She could save some animals and turn them into Sheep.

15 Years Later, Blossom is all grown up. Blossom watches from a window to see a sheep getting evicted from The Sheep Community. The Sheep was caught listening to the wrong music. Some townsheep even reported the Sheep had been writing letters to a Wolf.

Today is the day that Blossom and other Sheep Missionaries are designated Animal Kingdoms to travel to and spread the word of The Great Shepard. Blossom stands in front of a mirror and recites passages from The Book of Sheep while putting on a graduation gown.

Everyone gathers into the Church for the Ceremony. A Choir and Organ performance fill the room along with prayer. They also welcome all the Sheep who were converted from previous animals. An Ex-Cow talks about how happy they are to be a sheep. An Ex-Raccoon with a past criminal record talks about what it's like to pledge to The Great Shepherd. An Eagle still in the process of changing-talks about how grateful they are that The Great Sheep will be accepting him.

The Pope Sheep anounces the locations that Sheep Missionaries will travel to, to spread the word of The Great Shepard. One Sheep will go to the Pig Farmland, Another Sheep is selected for Bird City. Blossom's name is called and she is assigned Goat Mountain.

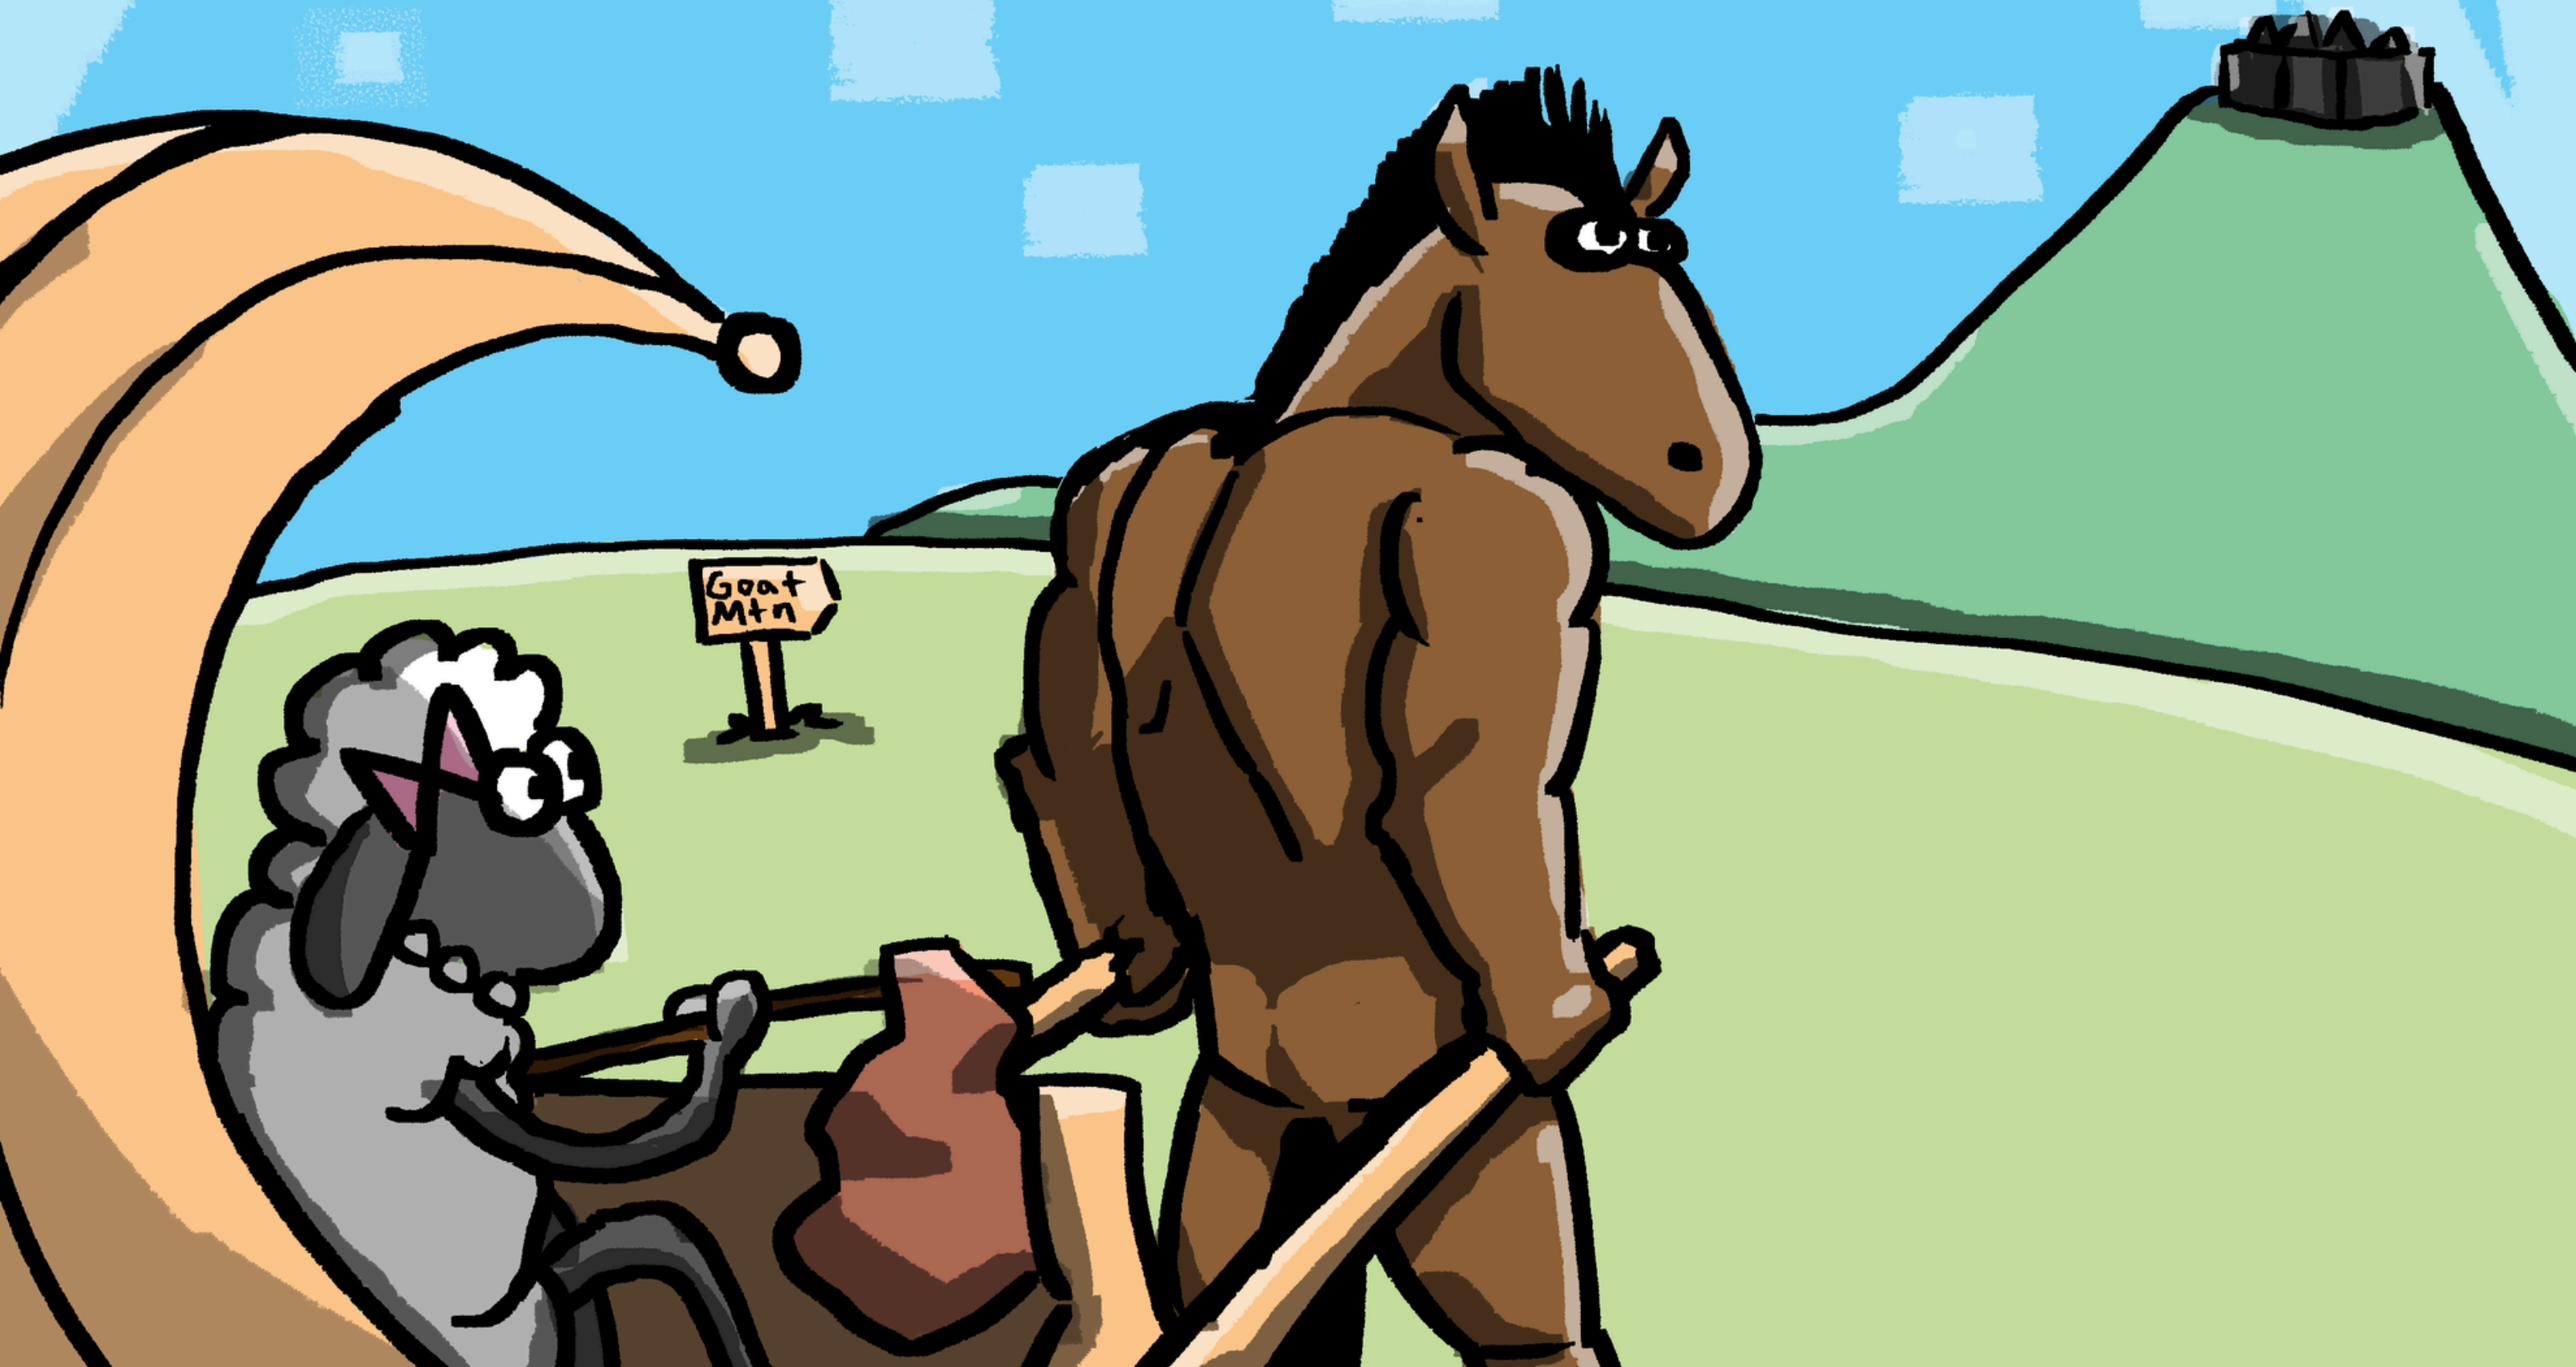
After the Ceremony is completed, Blossom's parents approach the Pope Sheep. They plead for their Daughter Blossom to be sent to a different location. They know Goats are difficult to deal with and they want Blossom to be sent to an easier location. The Pope Sheep refuses to change her location.

Blossom is excited for her mission but her parents become scared. They give her a necklace before she leaves as a graduation present. Blossom packs her bags with materials including The Book of Sheep and a map of Goat Mountain. Her boyfriend reminds her that if she is gone too long, she could turn into a Goat and then they won’t be able to marry.

Blossom waves goodbye to her parents and begins walking out of the village she grew up in. This is the first time she will ever step out of the Sheep Commune.

Blossom marches through a dark forest, a muddy swamp, a dry desert dune. Bioms beyond her imagination.

Blossom is offered a ride to the rest of the way to Goat Mountain by a Muel named Shmuel with a rickshaw. While riding Shmuel Muel's rickshaw, Shmuel Muel talks about how no one has converted a Goat to a Sheep in over 50 years.



Blossom enters the village of Goat mountain, which has an archway as the entrance. She is greeted by a Goat who tells her she will be her guide of the goat village and if Blossom needs anything she just has to ask.

Blossom is escorted over to the Sheep embassy house, where Sheep Missionaries live during their missions. On her way to the embassy, she passes by a poster advertising a musical dance night called Lupercalia with Goat music: The music that Sheep are forbidden to listen to.

Blossom is brought to her room which is mostly empty. The Goat escort is very kind, and Blossom insists on praying for The Goat and their savior by The Great Shepard.

When Blossom unpacked her things and opened her cupboard she found it to be empty. Blossom decides to go to the market to pick up food and general supplies. While at the market, Blossom hears Goats discussing Lupercalia.

Blossom starts talking to a Seller in the marketplace.
Blossom explains she is from the Sheep Commune and here to spread the word of The Great Shepard through The Book of Sheep.
The Goat seller tells Blossom that Goat Mountain doesn't get outside visitors often, but when we do, they always love the Ram-arkable views.
Blossom becomes uncomfortable with the joke and walks away.

The Goat Seller asks their partner if they did something wrong. The partner explains that jokes and laughing are taboo and not acceptable in Sheep Culture.

The next day, Blossom sets up a booth to spread the word of The Great Shephard. Most Goats ignore her and her flyers. She fails to capture the attention of other Goats. Day turns to Night and Blossom feels very ineffective and saddened with her 2nd day without a single Goat to Sheep Conversion.

Blossom, feeling defeated, rereads the story of Northclif and Sandra from The Book of Sheep.

“Northclif wanted to be a Hero. He would sit outside all day waiting for someone to ask him to save them, but no one ever did. Then one day, Northclif travels beyond his front yard, and meets Sandra.
Sandra is a Lobster who was doomed to a life without a husband. Northclif teaches Sandra about The Great Shepard and turns her into a Sheep and then asks her for marriage. Saving Sandra from a life without a husband and making himself a hero.”

Blossom is inspired reading this story and decides she can't wait for the Goats to ask her about The Great Shepard. She must go the Goats and show them.

The next day, Blosom takes direct action and walks up and down The Goat Town, and knocked on everyone's door asking if any Goat would be willing to hear the word of The Great Shepard. Most Goats would shake their head and refuse to listen to Blossom.

But then Blossom knocked on Nikki's door. When Blosom knocked on Nikki's Door, Nikki answered while dressed in a Clown uniform. Blossom, culturally against laughter and comedy, is startled by the physical appearence.

Despite Blosoms reservations, Nikki stil invited Blosom inside to learn about The Book of Sheep.

Blossom sits down in Nikki's home and asks Nikki why she is dressed like a Clown? Nikki explains she is a professional Clown and she will be working to make people laugh later in the evening.

Blossom says that in The Sheep Church, Nikki would be called a Laugh Worker and it is very Taboo. Nikki chuckles at the terminology, and says there is nothing wrong with making people laugh for a living.

Blossom explains to Nikki, For Sheep, Laughter is only meant for a husband and his wife. When you laugh with other people outside of a marrital bond, it becomes less special. One day Blossom hopes to laugh with her boyfeind when married, but until then she wants to keep her laughter sacred, as ruled by The Book of Sheep.

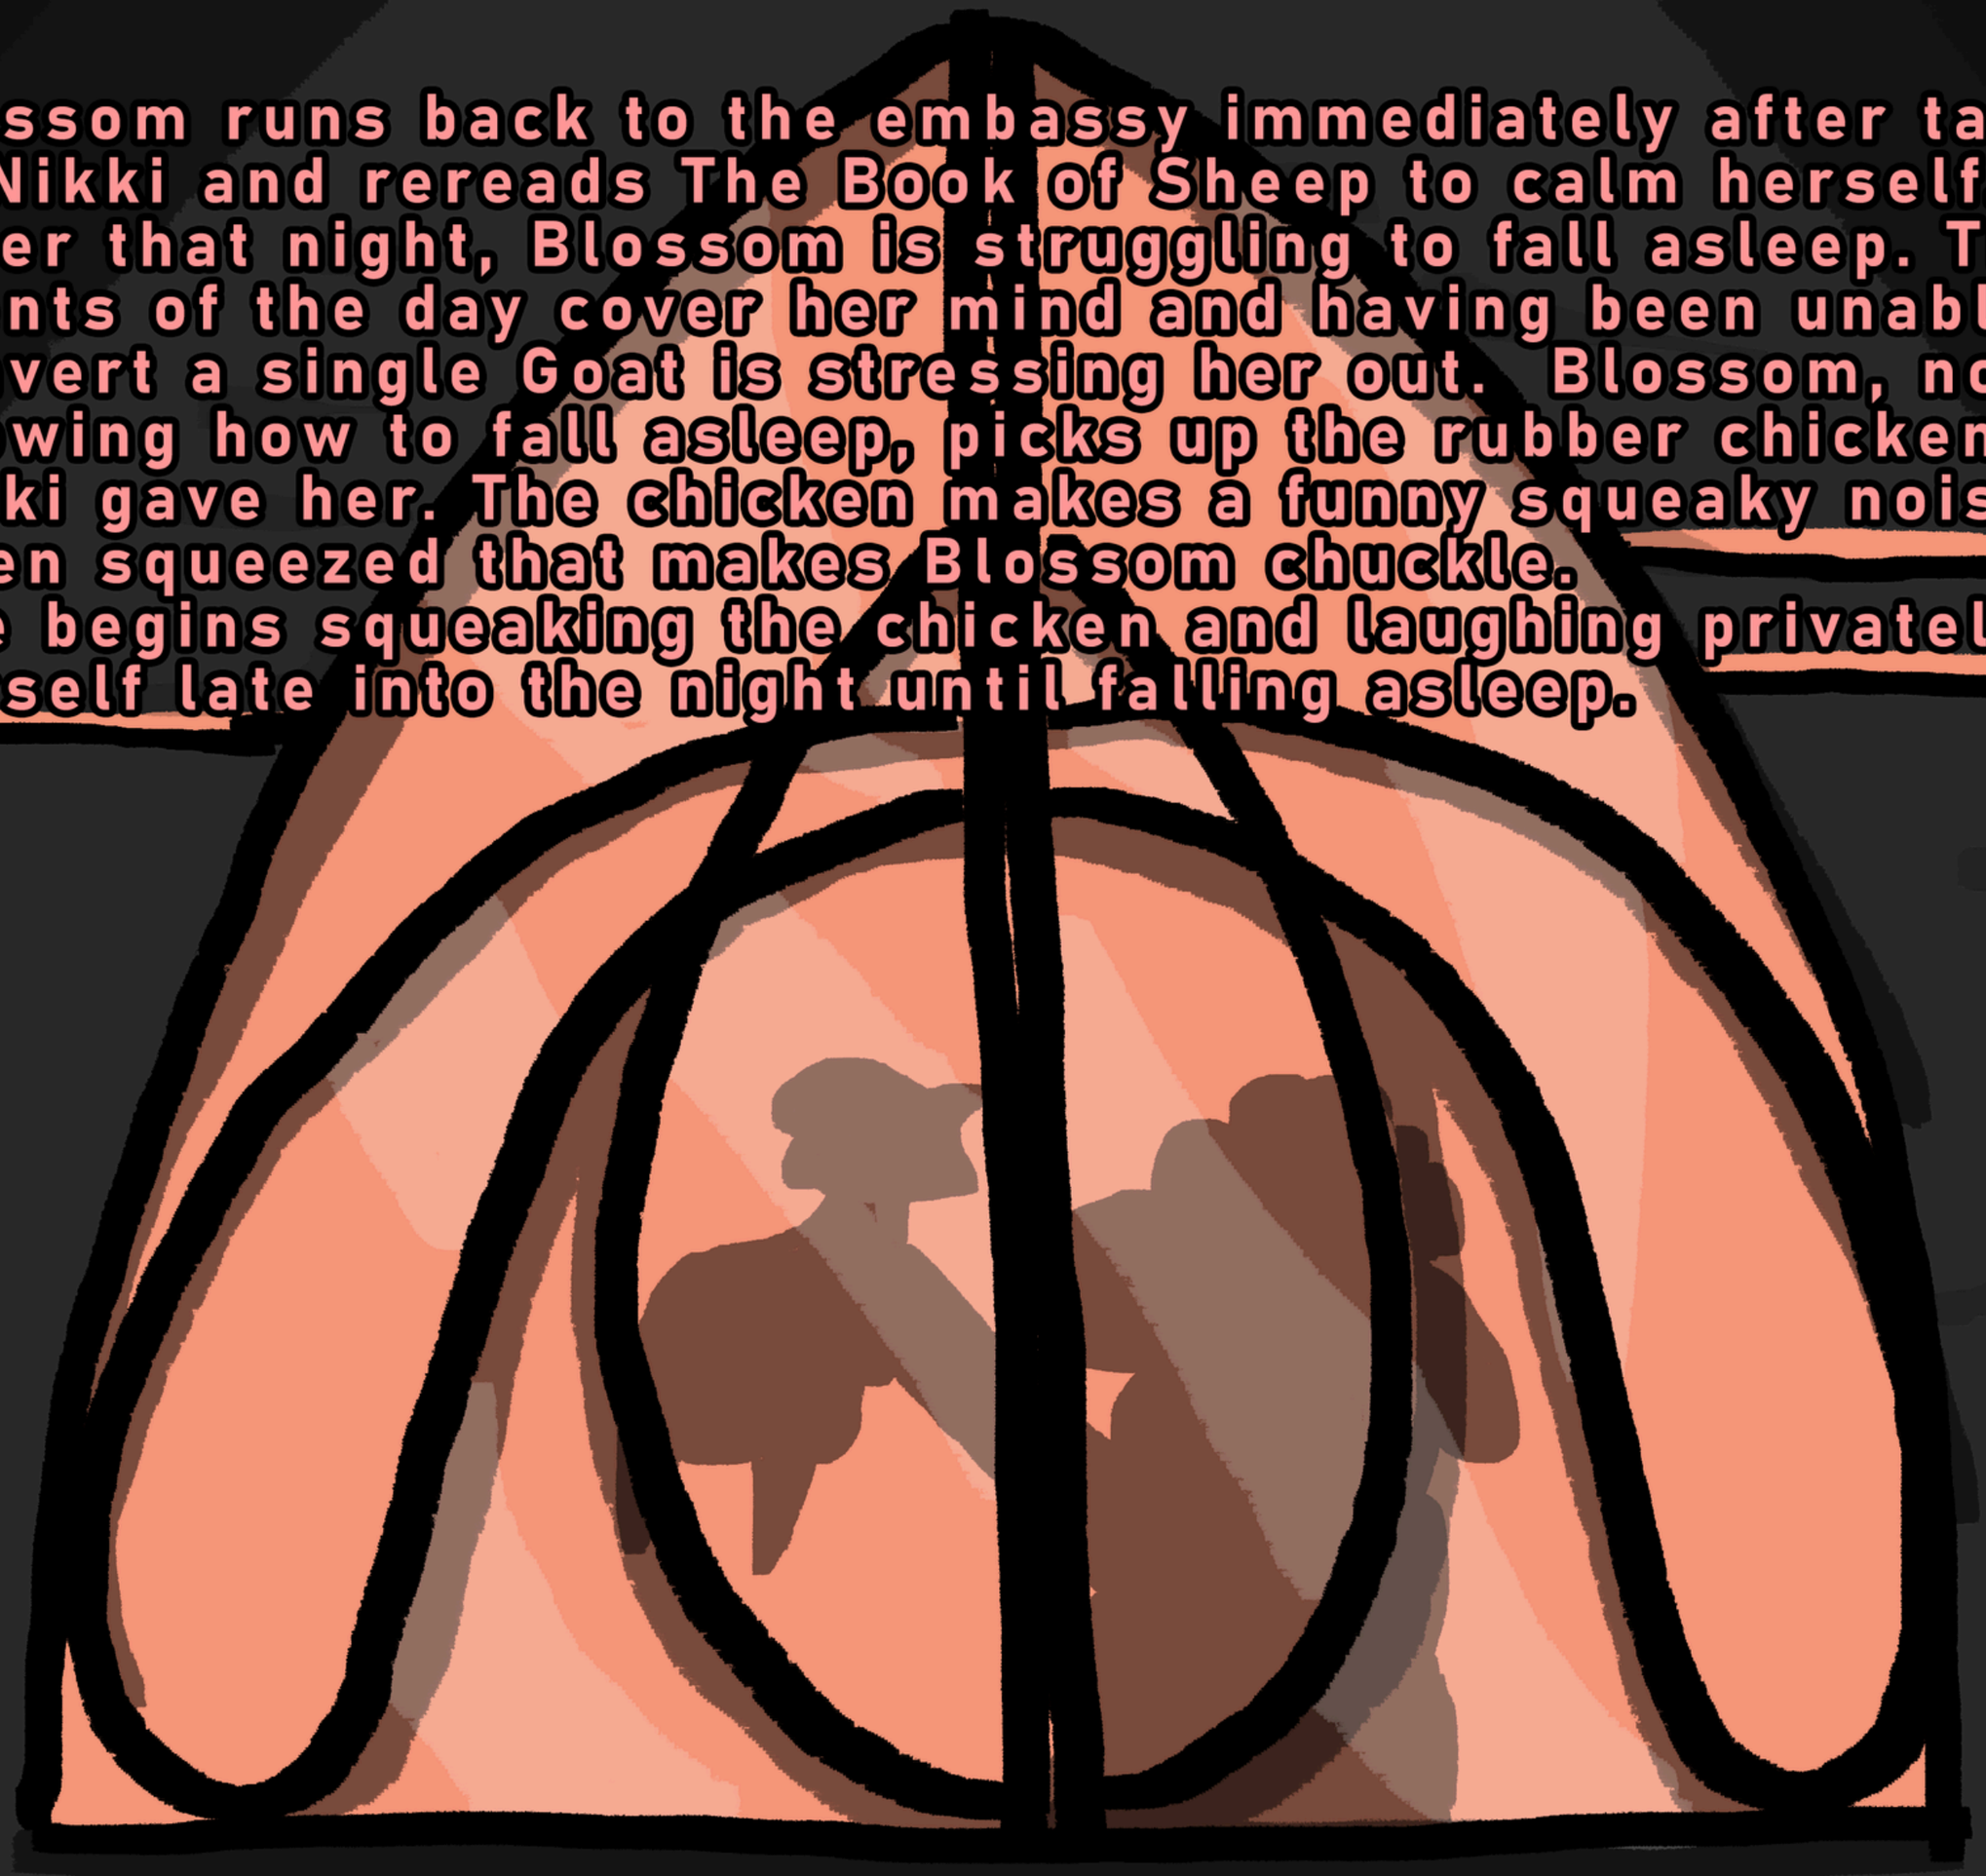
Nikki asks if Blossom has ever laughed. Blossom says no.

The Clown decides to tell Blossom one joke for free.

“What makes a Cat a great saleman?.... They’re very Purr-suavesive.”

Blossom chuckles at the joke and immediately blushes. Blossom decides she need to leave but before she does the Clown also offers Blossom a comical toy rubber chicken.

Blossom runs back to the embassy immediately after talking to Nikki and rereads The Book of Sheep to calm herself.
Later that night, Blossom is struggling to fall asleep. The events of the day cover her mind and having been unable to convert a single Goat is stressing her out. Blossom, not knowing how to fall asleep, picks up the rubber chicken that Nikki gave her. The chicken makes a funny squeaky noise when squeezed that makes Blossom chuckle.
She begins squeaking the chicken and laughing privately with herself late into the night until falling asleep.



Blossom wakes up the next morning with small horns on her head.

Blossom gets ready for the day and starts knocking on peoples doors again to spread the word. Blossom returns to Nikki's house asks to returns the rubber chicken.

Blossom explains she wants to give it back because she spent the last night laughing at it and now she will have to repent for sinning.

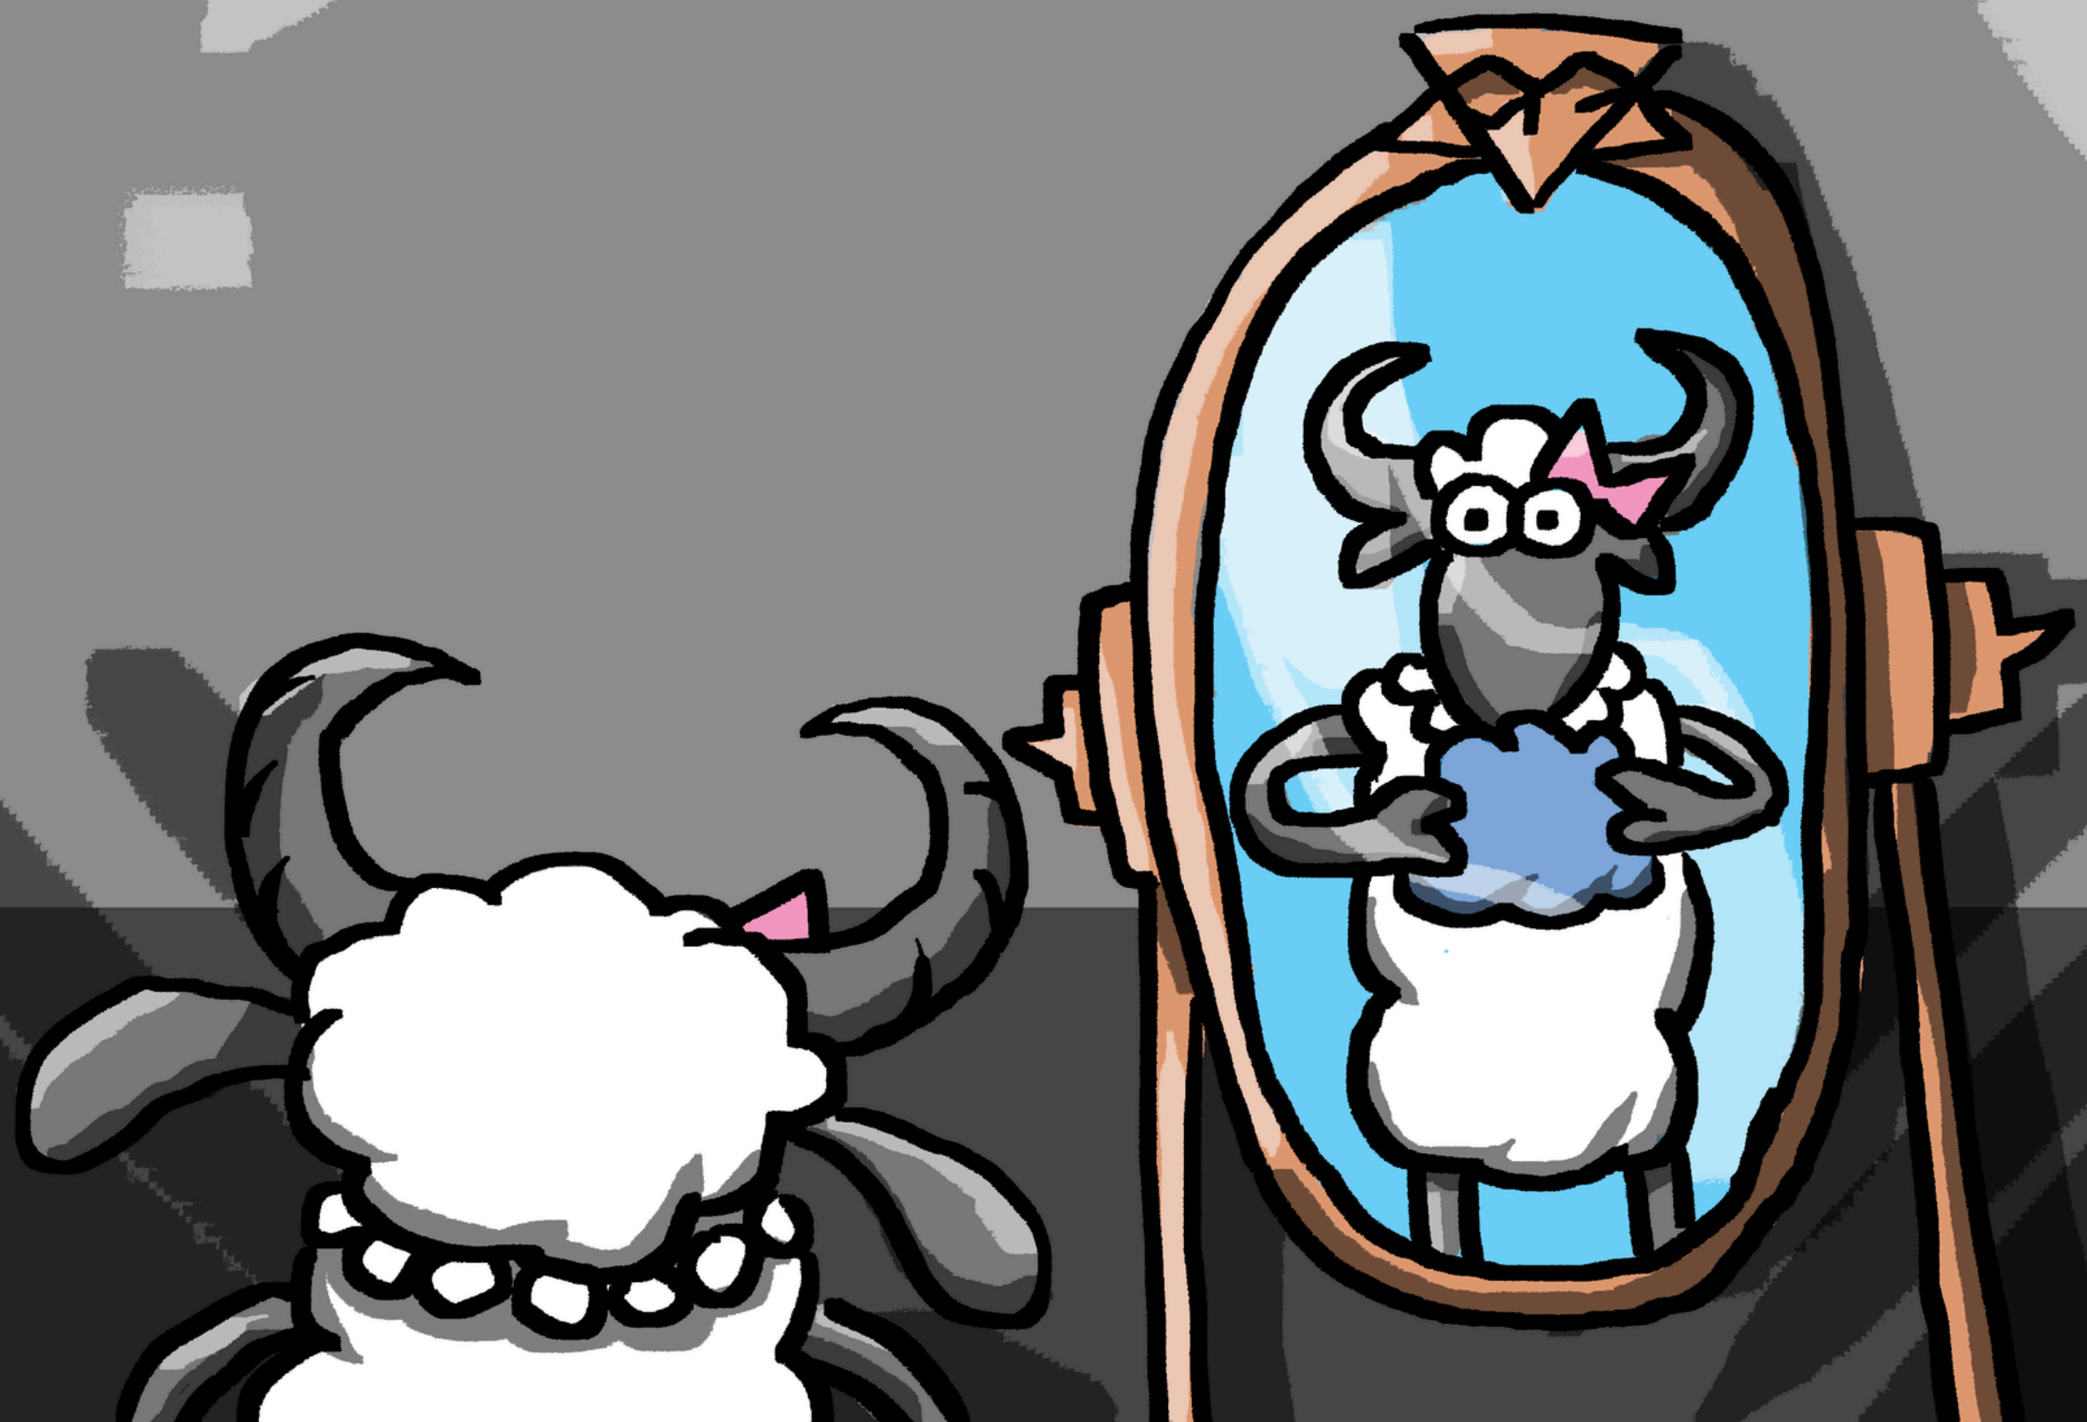
Nikki recommends Blossom check out the Lupercalia dance happening tonight. Nikki tells Blossom She might as well get a full experience with Goat culture. Blossom agrees thinking that maybe if she knows more about Goat culture she will have a better shot at converting some Goats into Sheep.

She goes into the bar and the Goats perform a lavish musical number.

In the show's display, metal music takes the lead,
With dancing and rap that'll make your heart speed.
Blossom, at first, merely observes the whole sight,
Then invited to sing, she adds to the delight.

As the night ends, she's dancing with glee,
Smiling and laughing, feeling so free.
Exiting the bar, late in the dark,
Knowing the fun, a thrill leaves its mark.

Blossom wakes up the next morning to find two giant horns on her head. Blossom thinks about how she could hide her new horns and remembers the Clown Afro that Nikki wore.



Blossom realizes the Clown Wig is a blessing in disguise. Blossom dresses herself up as a Clown and starts getting people to laugh to read The Book of Sheep. By telling Jokes, Blossom catches some Goats attention. Some Goats even ask for copies of The Book of Sheep.

All is going well until Blossom knocks on a door and Goat and Wolf open the front door.

Terrified to learn about a Wolf on Goat Mountain, Blossom runs all the way back to her home in The Sheep Commune in a panic.

The Sheep Church is very confused by the sight of Blossom dressed as a clown. Blossom excalims that there is a Wolf living on Goat Mountain living with the Goats. The Sheep Pope calls the Wolf a symbol of moral corruption. The Sheep Pope then points out that Blossom is dressed like a Laugh-Worker, and has likely been corrupted by the Goats and the Wolf.

Blossom's boyfriend walks over and pulls off her wig and freaks out when he sees the Goat Horns she has grown. Sheep cannot marry None-Sheep so their future togethor is now ruined. Blossom's parents burst into tears.

The Sheep Pope decides they need to find the Wolf of Goat Mountain, feather and tar, cut off the nails and pull out the teeth and burn down Goat mountain if they have to. The Sheep must follow The Great Shepard and liberate everyone from Wolves that threaten everyone.

Blossom is placed in a jail cell for dressing like a laugh worker. While in the cell, Blossom meets another sheep, Kent. Kent says he was put in prison because he discovered the Sheep Pope is actually a Wolf in Sheeps wool. If the Pope's Sheep Wool was taken off, everyone would see he is really a Wolf.

Blossom thinks about the Goats on Goat Mountain, How nice and freindly they were. How they taught her to dance, sing and laugh . It would be terrible if they were destroyed over a single Wolf. The Wolf in Goat Mountain hasn't even done anything.

Blossom decides she must do something, and picks the lock on the cell using her new Goat Horns.

Blossom and Kent ask an Eagle still transitioning to a Sheep to fly them to Goat Mountain before the angry mob of Sheep get to it. The Eagle agrees and flies them over.

Blossom explains to the Goat village that an angry mob of Sheep is on their way because she told the Sheep Church about the Wolf living in the Goat Village. Blossom apologizes for Her mistakes and then says the Goats need to defend themselves somehow .

The Goats set up their music speakers and when the Sheep Mob arrives to burn down The Goat Village, Blossom shreds a guitar and the wind from the speaker blows away The Popes' Sheep disguise.

The Sheep community realizes their Pope was a Wolf the whole time and their sheep wool begins to fall off to reveal their original animal. The entire Sheep community then turns on The Wolf for his deception.

The Interspecies Goat/Wolf couple come forward and say that despite being fooled by a Wolf in Sheeps wool, Wolve's are not what will bring destruction to Sheep, but lies and manipulation will.

The Pope is chased out of the town, and the remaining sheep and other animals begin to dance and embrace laughter and other music.
